

CALL FOR PAPERS

LONGWOOD UNIVERSITY
PRESENTS

THE ELEVENTH ANNUAL MEETING IN THE MIDDLE: MEDIÆVAL: MORE MODERN THAN NOT

An Undergraduate Research Conference in Medieval and Renaissance Studies
7–8 April 2017

Longwood's Medieval Undergraduate Conference has been bringing together students from institutions across the Southeast and Mid-Atlantic to share and showcase their research in Medieval and Renaissance topics. Past conferences have shown the diversity and richness of these fields, and so we again invite students and faculty from the many different disciplines in Late Antique, Medieval, and Renaissance studies to the literal "middle", Farmville, Virginia, where we will again find common ground.

Students may present 20 minute-papers on history, literature, art history, drama, music, philosophy, religion, or any other discipline dealing with the medieval or early modern eras.

This conference includes two distinguished plenary speakers: Dr. Edward Muir, Clarence L. Ver Steeg Professor in Arts and Sciences at Northwestern University and specialist in Italian social and cultural history; and medieval military historian Dr. Matthew Bennett from the Royal Military Academy at Sandhurst and Fellow of the Royal Historical Society and the Society of Antiquaries.

Please submit abstracts of 250 words, including your name, university, and paper title to:
Dr. Larissa Tracy: tracylc@longwood.edu or Dr. Steven Isaac: isaacsw@longwood.edu.

Deadline for proposals is January 25, 2017.
