

“War and Terror: How The New York Times Covers Today’s Global Conflicts.”

In conjunction with the Global Democracy Conference

A Presentation by Ethan Bronner

Deputy Foreign Editor
The New York Times

FRIDAY, JANUARY 26TH, 2007

4:00 PM – 5:30 PM

Lankford Ballroom
Longwood University

---

Ethan Bronner has been deputy foreign editor of The New York Times since early 2004. Before that, Mr. Bronner was assistant editorial page editor where he concentrated on foreign affairs, the law and education. He was the paper’s education editor from 1999 until 2001, and a national education correspondent from 1997 until 1999.

Before joining The Times, Mr. Bronner was with The Boston Globe from 1985 until 1997, where he started on general assignment and then covered urban affairs. He went on to become Supreme Court and legal affairs correspondent in Washington, D.C., and Middle East correspondent based in Jerusalem. He began his career at Reuters in 1980, reporting from Jerusalem, London, Madrid and Brussels.

Throughout the autumn of 2001, Mr. Bronner worked as an editor in The Times’s investigative unit, focusing on the attacks of Sept. 11. A series of articles on Al Qaeda that he helped edit was awarded the 2001 Pulitzer Prize for explanatory journalism.

Mr. Bronner is the author of “Battle for Justice: How the Bork Nomination Shook America,” which was chosen by The New York Public Library as one of the 25 best books of 1989.

ADMISSION IS FREE

Inspiring Thought

The New York Times
Knowledge Network™